

A winter's tale in photos

Recorder contest winners capture Franklin County

Each year, The Recorder holds an amateur photography contest and exhibit. The winners have been chosen for 2017 and are on display with other submissions in Studio C on the third floor of Wilson's Department Store on Main Street in Greenfield. There were three winners in the color category and three winners in the black-and-white category. Photos will be on display until Saturday, Feb. 11. All photos depict winter subjects and scenes throughout Franklin County. For a complete schedule of events and an event map, visit: www.greenfieldrecreation.com/wintercarnival

Cate Woolner of Northfield won first place for her color photo of icicles glimmering in the sunlight.

Jo-Ann Demers of Turners Falls won second place for her color photo of snowy branches framing a bridge.

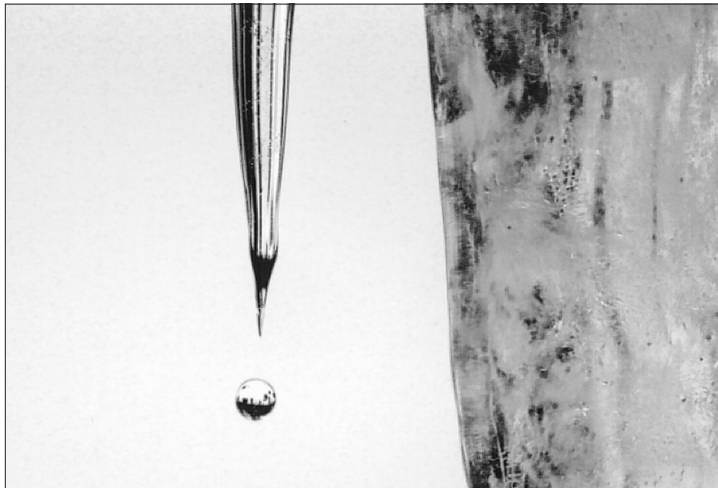

Vivien Venskowski of Gill won second place for her black-and-white photo of this wintery view of the Quabbin in New Salem.

Brian Foley of Greenfield won third place for his color photo of reed stalks in the snow on the Quabbin Reservoir.

Cathy Roberts of Shelburne Falls won third place for her black-and-white photo of these happy sheep.

Vicky Griswold of Shelburne Falls won first place for her black-and-white photo showing a reflection in a drop off of an icicle.