GREENFIELD — The town's Recreation Department has a new, improved, more user-friendly website at which people will be able to do everything from learn about programs and events to register for activities and camps to volunteer or learn about Greenfield's parks and trails.

"It's up and running," said recreation Director Christy Moore. "It's a lot more clear and organized. We're really excited."

Moore said users will also be able to buy or renew season passes to the town's swimming pool. "Different tabs will take people to different places, including events, our history and different programs," she said.

Users will be able to get the latest news, including updates on a dog park planned for Green River Park, installation of a splash park in Hillside Park and more.

There will be information and updates on the town's annual fireworks display, its annual triathlon and the Riverside Blues and BBQ, as well as others. Moore said there is something for youths, teens and adults.

"People can learn how to rent our facilities," she said. "Special events will also be listed."

Users will be able to get involved with the town's Recreation Department by volunteering or donating online, she said.

"They can also get our 2014 summer brochure online," she said. "I think people will have a much easier time on this site."

Moore said the department will continually update information so the most current is available.

“I hope people enjoy using our site and contact us if there are any issues,” she said.
